Yes, the audio snafu was a real bummer. The visual problem was that I had nothing to offer except extracts from the website (words, words, words). Rick's feedback was very fair.

Elsewhere, away from the presentation hall, I had a lot of people coming up to me thanking me and expressing considerable warmth, interest and appreciation. That was very heartening.

There was no criticism from anyone: not a peep. I made a lot of friends, I think. I also did seven or eight interviews (radio and TV/video). It all felt very positive. And spending time with Rick was fun... he tells some great stories.

Re: The rest, I'll leave it to Rick to answer, if I may. I can't be certain who I met!

Best to all,

BILL RYAN

Bill...It seems you did a fine job under (to say the least) very tough situations:

1. Mike not work
2. Visual aids and lighting not optimum
3. 50% folks not up-to-date
4. People sniping at you all week for being a reprobate and liar, and even worse...a murdering blaspheming devil, girl-friend bad boy, and geez...I LIKE you!

Well...you know what to think...bow give the Team of Five the REAL story!

What was it like? How were you treated? What was in the package? Why did you decide not to disclose it/them? (I agree it was wise...but still want to know what was in there!
